

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Mr. Isaac Upton, a young man, aged twenty years, died yesterday in the church. During the past few months he had suffered greatly from lung trouble, being unable to take a proper amount of exercise. For the past five days he had been at home, resting in bed, drinking only cold water. Water was his only remedy, and although he was not able to eat, it only aggravated him when he attempted to do so. Hunger caused him intense agony and suffering; the last time he attempted to eat, however, was the first time of his death.
